

PR CK

jest poems

by mike finley

Introduction

I recently appraised the bulk of my work over the past three years, and the materials I chose for readings, etc., and realized I wasn't much fun anymore.

To that end I compiled this collection, Prick. It is a compilation of knockdown, dragout, rib-tickling, backslapping humorous verse – what a repulsive phrase – going back to 1968.

Please enjoy it.

THE AUTHOR

Table of Contents

We Asked For A Sign.....	5
The Stink .....	6
We Irish.....	7
The Rapture .....	8
Shampoo .....	9
The Monster.....	10
Boy Pee .....	11
Frankenstein in the Cemetery .....	12
Eclogue.....	13
Is There NASCAR in Heaven?.....	14
Dream of God Driving a Bulldozer .....	16
Pain Was My Bread.....	17
My Darling Serpentine .....	18
Beheaded.....	19
At Fifty-Eight .....	20
Courtesy .....	21
Drama King.....	22
Cholla.....	24
Les Vacances Sont Finis .....	25
Doing the Non-Ado.....	27
Dream of Whitman.....	28
In Minnesota.....	29
Mobile Greek Chorus.....	31
Bad Neighbor .....	32
Le Train Envers .....	33
Bathtime .....	34
Critique.....	35
'Abandon'.....	36
Poets Ruin Everything .....	37
The Upset Sea .....	39
Calving .....	41
At Swanson Lake .....	43
Bloop .....	44
Apotheosis.....	45

Poet Wasting.....	46
Expectancy.....	47
Son of a Birch.....	48
Mighty Poem.....	49
Death by Gopher.....	51
The Claw.....	52
The Poem Room.....	54
Charley.....	55
Feces.....	56
The Wagon.....	58
Stepping Into Underpants.....	59
Permutations.....	60
The Boards.....	61
Cosmetic Dentistry.....	62
Writers.....	64
Old Man Mountain Climbing.....	65
Little Bighorn.....	66
At The Koin-O-Kleen.....	67
The Audience.....	68
Govinda And The Park Policeman.....	69
In a Tent.....	70
The College Of Poets.....	72
Beloved Bard.....	73
At The YMCA.....	74
Hitler In The Vestibule.....	75
Penn Station.....	77
Maury .....	78
The Clarinet Is A Difficult Instrument.....	79
Mm-Hmm.....	80
The Fly.....	82
Intuitions.....	83
The Tide.....	84
Tsunami.....	85
Why Did The Buddha Sit Under The Tree?.....	86
Parking Lot.....	87

Minivan.....	88
Man & Monarch.....	90
When You Encounter A Bear.....	91
To His Missus Returned from the Sea.....	93
Entrepreneur.....	94
Antic Hey .....	95
Browsers .....	96
My Poor Fish .....	97
When You Are Pope .....	98
The Newmans of Westport .....	101
God & Hippopotamus .....	103
Old Stone Enters Into Heaven .....	104
The Wreck of the Hesperus .....	107
University Avenue .....	109
'The Minstrel & The Ladie' .....	112
Embarrass.....	113
Death as Snack Cake .....	114
To the Young Poet Who Wished
To Know How to Do Better .....	115
Billboard .....	116
Remainders .....	117
Anteater.....	120
If You Like Poetry.....	121
Pandit.....	122
I Saw A Deer, Now I Must Write A Poem.....	125
Icky.....	126
Nighttime in Heaven.....	127

We Asked For A Sign

Three days he waited to fart.
Then it came, endlessly bubbling, like a machine gun in honey.
His widow smiled thinly.

The Stink<sup>1</sup>

Does not understand it is the problem

Brothers, sisters where are you going?

---

<sup>1</sup> Things (2009)

We Irish

It is said we hate the body and it's true.

It is said we punish with silence and we do.

Slow to anger, slow to judge, good thing we never hold a grudge.

It is said we have the sweetest songs since Rosie fingered Dawn but then we have our downside, too.

The Rapture <sup>2</sup>

Walking with Rachel,
We detect a fragrance
So sweet and so intense

Like honey, lilac and swirled violets
We look at one another
With a look of deepest longing

Until we step into a clearing And see the turquoise plastic Port O Potty.

---

<sup>2</sup> The Rapture (2009)

Shampoo <sup>3</sup>

When I was little I too howled when the stuff got in my eyes This before Johnson & Johnson was.

And though my mother cupped my brow
With the soft of her hand And pointed to the spider in the corner of the bathroom ceiling The spider I was to watch Until the coast was clear

I couldn't help myself, I looked And the soap was like daggers And I cried, how I cried

One day I discovered
You could live with the suds
If you simply closed your eyes

Until the foam was rinsed down Your cheeks and escaped down the drain
But you had to be willing to do nothing

I want to get word to babies everywhere
Oh my stupid little friends Wear the blindfold and you will never weep

---

<sup>3</sup> Moab (2005)

The Monster

arises at 6 am daily, commences abominations everywhere he goes he shits on beauty and not just a little, it is remarkable how it disperses an oscillating propeller fans the shit till it is everywhere and if you ask him what he thinks he is doing

he will say, I honor it with my attention and my stink

he is drawn to beauty but then must soil it he wants to be close to it to climb into its body it is the very intimacy that is so unnerving and after a while things are not so beautiful

then the monster moves on, and he takes the family with him and all of them glad to lie down among flowers

Boy Pee <sup>4</sup>

I waited outside the Port a Potty for the 7-year-old boy to finish and when I went in,
there was pee everywhere.

It was like London in 1940.
He had to point himself in 360 degrees.
All was devastated.

I know that boys have a powerful stream but they are so close to the seat, surely they could do better than they do.

Or maybe this is something they do on purpose.
Powerless in the greater world they let loose their stream behind the pulled latch.

And I daub the area with toilet paper and gingerly lower myself onto the damp, like a sad clown making way for the next act.

---

<sup>4</sup> The Rapture (2009)

Frankenstein in the Cemetery *

Here is where

I ought to be.

And here.

And here.

And here.

And here.

And here.

---

* This is the only poem of mine that Daniele ever told me she liked. Figures. It describes a scene in Bride of Frankenstein, where the monster waxes homesick for the graves of the bodies he is made of.

Eclogue

Half a Monopoly board blown into a thistle bush in the Colorado chaparral – the game ended here.

Is There NASCAR in Heaven?

There surely must be because of the glory
But obviously not the advertisements They will not be selling Winston and Kool 100s there
The afterlife is noncommercial though the cigarettes are free

And instead of cars which depend on resistance we will have something looser, I am thinking of songcars
You just sing and off you go There's no burning rubber in heaven no needle teetering on the red

And the guy at the loudspeaker Is also the guy with the checkered flag He's also the clown with the multicolored wig And up in the stands throwing down Crackerjack that's him, and slapping the mustard stain on his thigh,
him too

And we will not race in a loop anymore and not against one another But with one another like colts at play and everywhere and in every way Its going to be terrific, you'll see

And instead of celebrity drivers like Richard and A.J.
we will all be sitting at the wheel.
like movie stars in our astronaut suits and the bugs on our teeth don't even die they brush themselves off and fly away

Dream of God Driving a Bulldozer<sup>5*</sup>

He seemed very purposeful, and happy ... damned if I can figure out why

It's what he uses to get around ...
It isn't very fast ...
And the mileage is pathetic ...
But he has a ton of gas ...

He sits high in the seat, bouncing with every lurch, blue fumes pouring out around him ... as he leans into the dirt

He wears hard hat and safety glasses and a corncob pipe, which he clenches with his smile and a rag he uses to wipe

Everywhere his tread digs in ... it stutters in the clay ... then a wall of shit issues forth at the nudging of his blade ...

---

<sup>5</sup> The Rapture (2009)

* I wrote a dozen 'shake fist at God' poems in the wake of Daniele's death, So far, nothing terrible has (additionally) happened.

Pain Was My Bread

I must have been French

My Darling Serpentine <sup>6</sup>

I thought it was so tragic And nothing could be badder I peeked inside the basket and beheld the speckled adder

I predicted mass destruction
The rope could only tighten But no noose is a good noose
It was a cat-eyed python

I thought I had shed blood for you There was none such as this
'The poet of the universe'
And then I heard the hiss

---

<sup>6</sup> Desalinization (2010)

Beheaded

The word has been undermined so you think of mattocks and stained chopping blocks, it should be a term of approval, as in that is one well-beheaded young man, and he will go places, or her beauty was beheaded with a diadem of roses that pulsed with fragrance in the dying light, or for use in a vow when it must be especially clear what we intend, as I'll beheaded home soon

At Fifty-Eight *

It is something to celebrate, the day one turns fifty eight.

It is the midpoint of life's domain the fun half spent, the rest remains, one slowly cranks up the first high bend then roars like thunder to the end,

I drag the bag of bent clubs that are mine and commence the back nine.

---

* The joke here is insisting that 58 is life's midpoint

Courtesy <sup>7</sup>

When the arrow sticks
Don't make a fuss Reach behind you And find the shaft

If it is plausible break it off
But it won't be, so Don't make a scene

---

<sup>7</sup> Horses Work Hard (2000)

Drama King

The moment you cried out your disapproval, Your stirring Hey! Lashed out against all falsity, so sweet, the anger of almost being innocent, the voice of that part of the sinful world that did not think it was part of the sinful world

It tousled your indignation, because there is now no distinguishing the real from the false because there is no going back until blood has been shed and the old skin of need has been slithered out of for good and discarded in a husk of spent diamonds

And in that moment you were lost because You enjoyed it perhaps a little too much,
And a sickening part of you knew it would come back to that moment and try to recreate it, again and again and again, and summon fresh feeling against the lies of the world and this time really give it the gas, and this time your denunciation would be more artful and more telling, and this time the world would say, wow, this is even better than the other time and it is consummated

You are like a lunkheaded dog with only one trick only instead of rolling over you summoned all the authenticity you could simulate on such short notice and then like the leg of a wheel you spoke and you were too young and too beautiful to explain that they owed it to themselves to go fuck themselves because you were in no mood to prostitute the depth of your passion to salve their idiot wounds and even on the off-chance that you did, they would just say yes, that, there, you see, that's the thing you do that is so remarkable and then you must choose between killing them with the only object available to you, an ice-cream scoop with a silver handle and what a concavity that will make in their foreheads as if they had been blessed with a single wonderful idea but now it has been ushered away or turn your back on them and wrap yourself in your cloak and the night and that will be that for them, the beauty done and gone and not to be darkening this doorstep again any time soon and like Arthur Rimbaud, legless in Abyssinia, you are borne away on a litter, in a fever, raving and firing your pistols

Cholla

White thumb poking up from the desert roadbed, tell me what your high hopes are:

'To produce a prickly-plum of such perfect sweetness to offer my master the sun, so as to contradict my status a lifetime in a ditch dust-coated by passing cars.

Or is it to reach as far as thin fingers can go like intercessory hands and to serve as arrows of deflation in the hard black meat of your tires?'

Les Vacances Sont Finis <sup>8</sup>

(Our holiday concludes)

How can one think of going home
To the gristle of living The pummel of performance
The ordinariness that mugs you And shakes you down Till change fountains from pockets Puffed out like fleurs-de-lis?

One may live like the Baron of Beynac Resolute and armored More trilobite than man Brooding from his granite rampart A danger to all who glance up And get blinded by surmise.

Or one may return as tourist-as-clown Patting his wallet for reassurance The joker in the deck whose Hat-horns dangle, unerect to the last,

Not “I know” which is a wall of stone To crouch behind,
But “I think” or “perhaps” or “Unless I’m mistaken,” all hedged And botanical and bearing red berries A little translucent once held To the light.

And one would be slow in all that one does, Slower than a tree-sloth to minimize All sense of ownership because who Is an author, we are really all actors
All playing our part,
And “Introducing, as the sloth, the sloth.”

---

<sup>8</sup> Cartes Postales (2008)

But be thorough because Time has been set aside to do so Not the flash of lighting that sings Every sage eyebrow but the thick ooze That lubricates the belly of the slug.

And one will be worshipful For there is grandeur back there In Minnesota, one recalls,
And as following in the footsteps
Of the painters did not make one paint, So the guy with the guidebook was not not a fool.

Doing the Non-Ado

Coulda

Shoulda

Woulda

Buddha

Dream of Whitman

I dreamed I played basketball with the bard of America, he spun the globe on his finger and said, young fellow, you must not dwell inside yourself, step out, step up to the world where everything is revealed.
I stood in the rain on the bridge with him and he shouted into the din, There is no modesty now, no inhibition,
no deflected blows.
He clasped me around the shoulders:
My son, it all just goes!

In Minnesota

A friend showed me a poem he had written and I was appalled.
Why did you type these words, I asked.
It's so sad, you could have been brushing carrots instead, or changing the gravel in your fish tank, something useful.

What you wrote is so poetic and such a lot of work and so hard to understand, it's a wonder that you did it.

Have you ever considered that your muse is out to get you, to embarrass you so badly with her inspiration that you dare not leave your house?

Consider the possibility.

It's funny because life is full of adventures and coincidences and funny stories, but this is what we always write about O my soul the Stygian darkness ...

You know what we should be doing?
We should be laughing our asses off at our ridiculous lives and the bumpy journeys we've all been sent on.
We should be passing the jug and blowing wine out our noses at the incessant meddling of God, not hid indifference to our plights.

A poem should be like sticking your fingers in a lamp base to see what it feels like, it should make us clap like toddlers or tin monkeys with cymbals, we should be rolling our eyes and sneezing underwater.

Instead of writing what you've written you should appear on stage and flip a lightswitch a hundred times until everyone sees green and magenta circles blipping in front of their eyes, now that would be a poem.

But evidently I'm in Minnesota and we have taken a vow, and we'll say no more of this for now.

Mobile Greek Chorus

Radio dispatched, they can be on hand to minister to every moment of panic

They know somehow what is in your heart and what must be weighed against what Sympathetic to you, but also mindful of the needs of the larger community

Should you act out of rage or selfish desire, that might be it for Denmark

They explain what the hero cannot Because they have the common touch

Still the megaphones seem a bit much

Bad Neighbor<sup>9</sup>

He moved in after dark and I never saw his face.
Now I hear him moving furniture around.

At night when I lay awake He's banging out 'Honolulu Baby'
On his ukulele,
I swear it's the only song he knows

And he hasn't got a pretty voice And every ten minutes I hear him Crack open a beer, and ten minutes later Roll the empty across the floor.

I don't know what the hell he's cooking – Cabbage and licorice casserole? –
But the smell suspends for days and days, Like he's hanging it up there on a line,

He is always at the door,
A cup of sugar, I don't know, Maybe he's lonely and wants to talk,
Still I hide behind the drapes

Until the knocking stops
And his footfalls dwindle in the hall.
I wish he would pack up and move
And take that face I dare not see

But I've gotten to the point I don't think I can live Without him any more.

---

<sup>9</sup> You (2002)

Le Train Envers <sup>10</sup>

(The wrong train)

You watch the board with the flipping numbers
And suddenly it is your train and you race
To the gate, dragging your suitcase behind you
And you find the last car and you climb up the steps And collapse in your seat as the train pulls out.
For an hour all is well, the countryside Clicking by you.
Then you are in Poitiers and the train starts to slow
And you are seized with fear because you are on express to Paris, There should be no stops – the horror hits you.
You have boarded the wrong train.
You glance about at the other passengers.
How lucky they seem, to be going where they are going,
And not having to call Jean-Paul in the night and say Come get me, dear cousin, I'm in Brussels, I think.

---

<sup>10</sup> Cartes Postales (2008)

Bathtime <sup>11</sup>

You could be Fabio and still look silly in the bath.
It is unmasculine to recline in soapy water and relax.

Bobbing through the foam at the center of your self is the bobbin of the penis a buoy in a sudsy gulf.

Periscope, sea monster, bearded triton of the tub, bishop with a face only mother superior could love,

These ancient ablutions prepare us for bed.
Tuck in the little one and kiss him on the head.

---

<sup>11</sup> Cartes Postales (2008)

Critique

I slapped the man's manuscript in my hand.

“The truth is, your work is almost entirely masturbatory.”

He clasped me by the shoulders and gazed into my eyes.

“Finally, someone understands!”

'Abandon'

As a noun it can be a wonderful thing a severing of restrictions a tossing off,
'She gave herself to total abandon.'

As a verb it is to be avoided a father driving west away from his kids, a baby making fists in a basket
'When she most needed you was when you abandoned her.'

Only occasionally
it cuts a fresh groove.
'We abandoned that way of thinking as destructive.'
'She abandoned all claims and went forward.'

Poets Ruin Everything <sup>12</sup>

A roomful is like a guild meeting of the gods
And they are petty, jealous ones.

If they are friendly they are unctuous and you wonder What they want from you, perhaps the sense that they are not really very good But with a little politicking with you they might be admitted to the inner ring And thus avoid the death of being bad, and the embarrassment of having thought otherwise.
In any event they seem nice but you dare not believe them For they are peddling wax fruit from the back of a truck.

If they are unfriendly it is because they are intimidated by everyone Except the people they are able to intimidate, and they are always trying To decrease the first group by increasing the second one.
They are bullies plain and simple but they do it with attitude instead of muscle.
The work no longer matters to them, just who is in and who is out, and what explanation they can concoct for being out themselves.
A good excuse is better than a poem; in fact that is the kind of poem they write, and some are pretty good.

The worst are those who turn you into a member of the unfriendly group because they write a brand of inoffensive and sincere verse that ordinary people sitting in the front rows get, and these simple thoughts vault them to the head of the pack, and their poems appear in the more coveted magazines, and then you are the jealous one and obliged to loathe yourself, but at least you did not sneer at them at parties or call them names

---

<sup>12</sup> Desalinization (2010)

or if you did they were merely passive expressions.

"I couldn't wait to hear more of your work."

"When I read your poems I want to close the book and just be."

And then there are the others, you can't describe them because you never see them.

You don't know how much they drink or if they know their kids' names or if they worship Pan in a laurel grove because they keep their heads down, and when you read a poem by them

you feel your intestines knot because it is the real thing and you want to break into their houses at night and rifle their cupboards and bag up their secrets and then you would be as clean as them, but it's no good, because they're too good,
they aren't even aware that there's a competition, they seem plugged into some whole other thing and anyway you don't know where they live.

The Upset Sea <sup>13</sup>

Weather reports said it would get heavy but it still came on fast.
By noon the sea was rolling, 10 foot swells that pitched the boat repeatedly into the next wall of water, forcing people to huddle in the cabin and glance about with worried expressions.
The newlywed couple in front of us were sick she lovely in the face and eyes, he a little drunk and full from two too many cinnamon rolls.
So when he hove all over her, the pitch of the boat was such that it dripped down off her and onto the floor, including my backpack beside her,
until it was swimming in chowder, Meanwhile the boat was rocking and rolling and I was torn mentally between thoughts of the craft's capsizing and thoughts that that might rinse the backpack clean.

A small young woman from the excursion company stepped forward, miraculously able to right herself, and began to press the woman with paper napkins, the brown nonabsorbent kind you find in lavatories.
Still she knelt like Magdalene in the typhoon to daub the shaken woman's sweater and jeans, then led the two back to the bow where the pitching was minimal.
She staggered back to see if I wanted to empty the pack and she would hose it down.
Ashamed by her graciousness, I nodded.
She offered me gloves but I said no,
I was once a dad and waded through worse than this.

The boat continued to pitch and yaw

---

<sup>13</sup> The Upset Sea, 2010

and the newlywed woman returned, boyfriendless, to stare sullenly out the window.
But when we ducked back into the inlet, away from the raging sea, she rose and rejoined him at the gangplank, where they kissed and smiled, but remained stationed for a quick getaway, wanting to face people no more.

"I want to thank you for your positive attitude," said the brave young boatswain, whom I wanted as a daughter.
"And you for your courtesy," I replied, sorry I would never see her again.

And as Rachel and I walked safely ashore,
I lifted the backpack to smell.
It was all there, my computer, my wallet, my cellphone, my journal, my books, and mixed in with it all, the sea itself, plus raging stomach juices, plus the faintest hint of cinnamon.

Calving <sup>14</sup>

The toe of the Northwestern Glacier is blue as a bubble gum snow-cone.

It is the way light refracts under the pressure of a million tons of freezing and grinding.

Still it looks stunningly wrong, as if someone has spray-painted a mountain.

The passengers on the excursion boat crowd around the railing, snapping and popping.

"It was much more spectacular last year," complains a woman holding her hat on.

The boat has quieted, we are to sit here until something "calves" and slips into the sea.

An Indian woman with a bright red bindi steps back into the cabin giggling: "It is too cold!"

The boat bobs gently, we all stare intently.
Several minor fallings occur, and the ice and snow crumbles into the cold fjord waters,

"That chip hasn't budged all summer," said the first mate, of a 10-story chunk that is skronking away from the main.

A knucklehead, standing by the bar turns from the view just long enough to say,

"Maybe if we used some dynamite," hyuk-hyuk, and that is when the ice-pin chose to fall

---

<sup>14</sup> The Upset Sea, 2010

and down it slides with a cracking sound as if the entire ocean had broken,

150 feet high, surrendering, like a fat lady in a burning building letting go and tumbling into the big blue net, and the wave it made rose higher than the boat and soon we are the chip rocking in its wake.

Everyone feels an enormous release and is enormously pleased.

We have seen a mountain fall into the sea and we need to get with our day.

"Dang," says Goofy, "I shouldna looked away.

It doesn't bother anyone that each calf pushed out of the glacier's haunch happens further up the hill.

So the captain starts puttering away, the only witness to our great good fortune a harbor seal plopped up behind us, like a minstrel smacking his whiskered lips.

and in an English actor's voice intones

"They took to the sea, but the sea loved them not and spat them back upon the shore."

At Swanson Lake <sup>15</sup>

Little Cora floated in an inner tube, butt poking through,
and footy-paddled into the reeds.
When she emerged she was covered with a hundred black leeches.
Her sisters screamed and would not help, the mother and brother knelt and began to pick them off but the young were so small that when you picked them from a toenail they squiggled under your fingernail.
Finally the two got to the bathing suit and the brother began to cry and ran away because up one sat the mother of the brood, bigger around than a tricycle tire so the mom made several forays to fetch her out, she wished there were a tool that could pluck monster leeches from little girls' hineys but there was only her fingers that could not get a grip on the slithery thing and when she finally grasped it around the middle and tugged it out, making a schlocking sound and Cora cried with all her might and stood on the sand, naked, suckered, and blinking on the sand.

---

<sup>15</sup> The Upset Sea (2010)

Bloop <sup>16</sup>

Lips pursed, the fish in the bowl stares goggle-eyed out of its tank.

It forms one perfect bubble, inside which is nested a single syllable, which asks one simple question –

Why?
Why?
What did I do?

---

<sup>16</sup> The Upset Sea (2010)

Apotheosis

Given lengthening life expectancies, it is logical that a man will some day enter the ladies room by mistake, and then it is incumbent upon everyone there to keep it together, for the women to be cool, because this is not the way maniacs act, this does not lead to blood, except the blood that goes to the face because the man was thinking about something or other and pushed the wrong door, it could happen to you if you let your guard down in that sense it is an index of virtue, because for one second in your life you were too afraid to be afraid and you look goggle-eyed into one another's faces, astonished, befuddled, perhaps even kindness played on the edges of that horrorstruck look, in the way that embarrassment, nakedness, the fact of our bodies must bring us together.
even if we then veer off in opposite directions and never speak of this to anyone, for a second we were together, holding everything precious we own in damp and trembling hands, and you wonder, if I can do this and live,
what other limits are there?

Poet Wasting

The main reason we hunted them down was because there was so dang many of them.

We're not a cruel people, it would have been crueler to let them live.

Put a bounty on their heads and set them loose at the onset of winter, run them down before too long and if you sent the liver to the DNA

for testing and it came back OK
you got to keep the whole thing.

It was hard at first, looking into those plaintive eyes then jacking the trigger

It wasn't their fault they were so numerous, all they ever really wanted was to say a thing so it lived a while in the heart but even that got old after a while

Expectancy

(found poem)

The Lifetime of a lightbulb is the number of hours it lasts before going out.

Charlene buys a lightbulb with a lifetime of 932 hours.

How many weeks can Charlene expect this lightbulb to last if she uses it exactly seven hours and 40 minutes every single day?

Son of a Birch

The birch tree is a flasher bolting out of the clearing.
See how white my pale ribs are,
how flammable my skin,
I tell you I'm a firestarter!
I always want to peel it off till I'm bare! bare! Bare!
I'll blind you if you peek!

Mighty Poem

There is a paradox in English, that some words mean the opposite of themselves.
Thus sanction can mean either permission or impermission.
Now, one of our commonest words, might,
can mean raw power, almost beyond measure, the might of the hydroelectric dam, the might of God,
the might of Mighty Mouse, and on the other hand it is the subjunctive form of the verb may, meaning it's possible, conceivable, it could go either way.
Looks like it might rain.
I might go to the dance with you, a locomotive might be a speeding hound, or it might not.
You can feel the power leak out of that form.
The subjunctive maybe – it doesn't get less mighty than that.
And most poets take refuge in the maybe-- I might change my life.
There might be a God,
A man might dream,
who knows.

*

Poets are pussies, it's a well-known fact.
We languish daytimes on our sofas in our gherkins and blue silk stockings, chewing our hangnails, play Mother Might I and order out.

We are like oil paintings of sad clowns with bleared greasepaint that normal people can't look at long because it causes confused feelings.

And when we fight we are like women slapping because we are afraid to land a punch.
We think about flowers and our dead grandmothers and maybe we suck on our thumbs,

*

When are we going to fight like men?
When will we challenge ourselves not to be more sensitive or to bear greater pain or to honor the past but to advance a proposition and make it stick?
Why are we so miserable and insecure and envious?
Who cares what fucking Frank got from the Carnegie Mellon Fund?
Why aren't we being obvious, and sentimental, and funny?
Why aren't we getting drunk and falling down the stairs?
Why are so few poems about ballgames and tits when those are what we love?
Why aren't love poems gushing out of us like springwater from a stone?
Why aren't we thanking our mothers and fathers?
We should be endorsing candidates and christening bridges and honoring the dead.
We shouldn't be going over anyone's head including our own.
We should be clear as champagne and twice as fun.

*

A mighty poem is not a maybe poem.
It flows like rushing water to the sea.
A mighty poem is for everyone.
It tolls for you as well as tolls for me.
A mighty poem burns calories and works on you until you have to stop and breathe.
A mighty poem is willing to pay the cost.
It says to you, get furious, or lost.

Death by Gopher

He's cute by the campsite bounding from crumb to crumb, cupping your leavings in tiny twig hands and rotating it as he gnaws.

A trail of shredded wheat leads to your fire till he dashes up your pantleg and you commence to hop around

Slapping your cuffs and calves and thighs and imagining those tiny twigs are sinking into flesh

You picture it diving into the hole it made in your muscle and rooting around in your meat.

You are in a fine state now pointing your pistol down your pants and squeezing off a round and lying down

Staring up, the Milky Way all creamy and a shooting star too quick to draw, the snap of a log in the fire

Close those eyes, brave chevalier,
and know that nature was never your friend

The Claw

I invented bits of business with my kids.
One was a character I would turn into while they sat on my lap.
One moment I was their loving fond father and the next thing you knew I was The Claw and I would utter the name like that, hyperdramatically,
as if something were caught in my throat.
The hand would go up, it would cast a shadow on their wide-eyed faces.
They knew something incredible was about to happen, and it did, The Claw descended, found their soft child bellies, and commenced to tickle.
What agony it was, writhing under my stiff-fingered wiggling.
I could feel their wonderful abdominal muscles clench, and then The Claw would evanesce, and they would be in my arms again, and I would blink as if I remembered nothing of the terrible transformation.
Where did he come from?
A dark radio-drama world where monsters in trenchcoats blew fart-noises into the tummies of small children.
The lesson was that the world could be naughty, and even loving fathers had a secret side but it was OK, The Claw was never around for very long, and we laughed and laughed and laughed.

The Poem Room

It is a place of shame, the only room with a lock on the door.

To make it come out you loosen your garments and drop them to the floor.

There is paper there for you to use, one sheet after another.

But when you are done how proud you are of what you have authored.

You want to call people in to show them what you've made and they smile because they don't want you to feel dismayed, but in the end it is the one thing you do that is expressly you

Charley

I wanted my son Jon, a smallish kid heading off to school, to feel strong.
So I invented a persona for him, named Charley, a guy with an attitude, not especially sensitive,
the kind that doesn't sweat the small stuff, the kind that acknowledged you by raising his chin, as in Good Time Charlie.
When he climbed up the giant steps of the school bus, I'd say to him,
"Hey, have a good day, Charley."
It was something just for him, a cool cat.
But the driver heard it, and so did some of the kids.
So I learned, twenty years later, that half the kids at his school thought his name was Charley, and called him that throughout his elementary years, and being shy, he never corrected them.

Feces

Freud was right on,
They are a key to every little life, they are the threshold of not-OK.
They are a guarantor of calamity,
A ruiner of days,
They are the thing you want at all costs to avoid,
The thing to keep behind you always, that trips you up and peels you from the throne of respectability, and tells you,
you must go.

And yet they come out of you,
they are you,
they are homunculi of who you are,
they are your little tar babies, they have your eyes, they are the part of you you want to get far away from,
and that is a major paradox for the 2-year-old.

To be found out, to fail, there is no disgrace completer.

Logically everything relating to them is awful, unlovable, stinky, and to be shunned.
No amount of washing, no slathering of soap makes them right, you aren't even really supposed to poke around even though it is you and your solemn responsibility and yet ...

and yet ...
and yet they remain riveting in their own strange feckless way incorrigible,
they bear the mark and are your mark..

It is as if,
when the two of them in the garden,
you know the famous two I mean, they who had never before known waste, having had a bad, bad, bad, bad day, Had it read back to them then,
the riot act I mean to say, and the perfect world was shuttered, all was forfeit, all was lost,
and the one thing they knew,
as they picked their way through the fallen world, was they had to go.

The Wagon

I was six when we moved to Vermilion-on-the-Lake, six doors down Niagara Road from the lapping Lake Erie

Mornings and afternoons I walked the bluffs and beaches gazing out at the choppy gray water

One day I took it into my head to fill my Radio Flyer with dead fish and roll it back to my mother's house I don't know what I was thinking that she had a recipe for 30 pounds of eyeless, sand-pounded carp

I had to bury them in the field behind us my mom was very clear on that and I stood over the grave with a shovel and I vowed as God was my witness to keep an eye on my judgment in the future but I have to say, all these decades later the problem persists

Stepping Into Underpants

gets harder every year.

The knees get stiffer, the hips do not want to make the number four, the one foot hopping on the floor leads the body into the bedstead, the doorknob, the chair.

And the seat of the underpants is not new cloth, the fabric has grown tired from so many washings, and sittings, and scratchings, the elastic has been through the dryer too often, it stretches but it no longer snaps back.
it is more like a veil than a rampart, and the stabbing foot could so easily miss its target and plunge through the rear panel entirely.

And it will only get worse, until the old man has to sit on the bed, and pull them on the way George Washington did,
with a stable boy to assist you, and an aide-de-camp standing by,
proud nostrils flaring.

Permutations

Permutations of n things taken r at a Time

We learn this phrase in algebra.

It asks how do we arrange a list of possibilities – if 10 horses run a race.
what are the chances for win, place, and show?

And so it goes.

Every crossroad contains x possibilities.

What happens if we turn left or proceed forward, or veer off the gravel and into the corn?

There is a formula to help us get a handle on this, but it raises as many questions as it answers.

$${}_n P_r = \frac{n!}{(n-r)!}$$

But what if, as happens,
P is an elastic variable?

The mare with the the white flame on her face could come up lame on the second turn, pulling at her straps.

The rider in green could think to himself, What I have really always wanted to do is paint.

Or he moon could turn out after lengthy investigation to be a sourball hanging in the August sky.

The Boards

Be joyful as you climb the steps put spring in your toes and the treetops

You are measured out for these sleeves and boxed in by these exigencies

God gave you bells so give them a shake let them tinkle to the striking clock

Say oh what a beautiful day as if you were Gordon Fucking McCrea

Cosmetic Dentistry

First the bad news.

The teeth you now run your tongue over will all be leaving your head, like that woman with the four-million-year-old skull whose canines were scattered like dice near the jaw in the red dirt of Africa's Afar Rift, because bite the dust is what teeth do.

My neighbor is a cosmetic dentist, you can tell from the way he keeps his lawn he is a proficient, too.
He knows teeth are designed to last a lifetime provided your lifetime is short and brutish, but his job is to extend the warranty, painlessly, with amazing glue and diamond drills, through the lengthy and lovely lives so many enjoy today.

Jung says that an archetypal dream is that we are standing over a sink and our teeth fall out of our mouths and clatter down the drain and we try to catch them but they are gone.
Turns out it's a dream about mortality.

The good news is, it doesn't bother your dog that he's going to lose everything, including his canines, which you don't brush though you know you should, though you love your dog a lot but it's kind of a bother to brush your dog's teeth and why shouldn't his ivories
last the full fifteen years, when all he eats is toasted soybeans.

And the dog never dreams that dream of standing in the bathroom mirror watching his mortality clank against porcelain because he's a dog and they are spared that, unlike you and maybe unlike the Ardipithecus lady if people were already starting to dream about teeth four million years ago in Ethiopia.

Why are we the ones haunted the way my poor neighbor the dentist is, everything has to be just the right way, on his knees in the grass on Saturday mornings in June, exhaust seething from the chainsaw in his hands, grinding away at the imperfect stump.

Writers

Writers start out all right they pay attention to things and deliver reports on the way things are, it is a useful function they perform

but then something happens someone will say, you know, this is interesting, and you can see it go bad like a banana going brown they enjoy the attention and want more and tell themselves I could create lots of these reports, they're not that hard to do now that I know how to do it and then they want readers and they they want comments and then they want praise

and then they want praise
coming out of the faucet night and day like an endless drip.

until they are no longer reporters but debutants on a featherbed chins in their hands and their feet wagging behind them tell me more about myself tell me more and they're not working for you any more you say everyone needs encouragement it's not true encouraging only encourages them

Old Man Mountain Climbing

The old man begged not to begin the ascent, but we looped a rope around his head and dragged him up, gasping.

Oh, don't be so negative we called back to him, staggering
And admit it, you need exercise, use it or lose it!

Halfway up he collapsed on the rocks, his eyes rolling bloodshot red at. Come on, old feller, we tugged at the rope,

I must admit he did his level best, on those shaky pins wobbling His breath wheezing out like an asthmatic accordion

And when we dropped him off at his place, we winked to each other

You know he's going to have a good long sleep now!

Little Bighorn

I take my boy to the battlefield we pause in the locust grass to read a warning sign, 'Beware of rattlesnakes. Stay on the path! '

My son's little hand in mine we climb the steady ridge where the Sioux appeared that day like feathered cougars in the sun.

I point out the crosses.
'The soldiers fell here, understand?'
'Yes, daddy, they stepped off the path and the rattlesnakes bit them dead! '

At The Koin-O-Kleen

Am I the only one who likes running his hands through soiled clothes in public?

we pretend we're on an elevator, intent on something straight ahead.

The enormous man on the sorting table sips Mr. Pibb through a straw, naked to the waist.

Tattooed on his right tit is the word SWEET,

on his left the word SOUR.

The Audience

Sometimes I played out in back of the meat mart, hoping maybe the Polanskys would see me, let me into the pool,
let me ride the horses,
or let me watch Steve's go-kart.

One day I opened a drum by the rendering plant.
Inside were the eyes of a hundred head of cattle, some looking this way,
some looking that,
and that, and that, and that, and that, each one the size of my fist.

Today Steve Polansky still works at the meat mart.
He and his brothers run it now, hauling the sides of animals on hooks up and down the sawdust floors.

But with me it was different.
I was an actress,
and I lived for my audience.

Govinda And The Park Policeman

The enlightened one and a disciple walked down a mountain road to sit at the foot of the cascading waters that were famous in that province.

And it was here at this waterfall that he understood
For the first time the poured-outness of God
Into the world of nature, how divinity infuses itself In the commonest things, the splash of a trout Or an insect's buzz in the hollow of one's ear.
And when his meditation was complete.

The two climbed back up the mountainside,
Where a park ranger was issuing them a citation.
What is the matter, officer? he asked.

You park registration is good for sixty minutes
But you have been here for almost an hour and a half.
I see, said the compassionate Buddha. But you know,
We were praying by the waterfall and lost all sense of time.
That may very well be, the ranger said, but it's not honest To pay for sixty minutes, then try to get away with ninety.
I assure you, officer, I had no intention of deceiving.

But as you can see, I am but an old monk,
And these legs are not so fast at climbing steep hills
As my young companion's.

Then you should have paid for three hours, said the ranger.
Perhaps you should put a meter on the waterfall,
So people can deposit their money directly, said the disciple,
Who was red-faced with irritation.

Peace, my son, said Govinda. Indulging in sarcasm Solves no problem, and creates many.
Besides, this good man is merely doing his job.
Write him a check then for the full amount,
But mark on the memo line:
"A tax on illumination."

In a Tent

I would like the night to be over.
I would like my mattress to reinflate.
I would like my sleeping bag to stay where I put it and not slide toward the lowest corner of the tent.
I would like the morning to suddenly be here.
I would like the pain in my kidneys to ease.
I would like to be able to get up, find the zipper and pee in the bushes without walking into fresh spiderweb and imagining its builder tightening its hairy noose around my penis.
I would like to close my eyes and dream of happy times and happy places, not children tied to chairs and forced by cruel kidnappers to eat cold chop suey with pimentos, the canned kind.
I would ask that whatever is making that chug and response sound down by the lake edge finish its business and shut up.
I would like my teeth to not taste like someone else's.
I would like to take a long shower and wash my butt, and shampoo the pine sap out of my hair.
I would like, when morning finally does come, that I could stand and walk the way I used to, not this rickety poststroke hitch last night left me with.
I would like for a day so sunny and so dry that it would drive the damp like Rommel's camels from my sodden bag and towels.
I would like for zippers to zip, stakes not to bend double, socks not to electrostatically attract pine needle, foxtail and burr.
I would like my wife, who is sleeping so beautiful beside me, her cheekbones catching the half-moon light, to awaken and hold me and offer me succor for my pains.

I would like if it nature did not require this expensive entourage for me to spend a night in it, and I call on God with all the influence I can summon, allowing first that I do love the mountain and I do love the tree to explain why the cost of a little beauty is so much pain, while I slump like Achilles in my tent, blinking at the canvass sky.

The College Of Poets

We were cut off from one another for so long,
And now we are assembled Yearning to connect and tell one another
We understand, we understand, we understand.

All the envy has been hosed away.
If we criticize it is in the name of collegiality And solely with the objective Of making a good thing better.

Garlands of asphodel deck our brows Figures of speech hover in the air:
'Amputees twitching their phantom limbs'
'Neutered dogs attending to their nutsacks'

Beloved Bard

He can't even go out to eat Without someone with a napkin and ballpoint Asking you for a quick line.
He is unfailingly polite
And dashes something off
But he wishes just once He could enjoy his spaghetti

At The YMCA

I scaled a Matterhorn on the Stairmaster machine, ran a mini-Marathon on the indoor track, changed into my trunks and swam the length of the pool a half dozen times.

I showered high. Endorphins were going off inside me like little fireworks of drugs, good feelings about myself and the world.
Back at my locker I sat on a bench, opened the door and grabbed my briefs,

poking my feet through and pulling them up.
My, they felt so snug, so sexy, so new!
Exercise does wonderful things to your head!

That was when I noticed none of the clothes in the locker looked familiar. Come to think, weren't my underpants blue with a white waistband?
I blinked at the locker, twice, saw it was somebody else's.

I rubbernecked to right and left, to see what men were near,
naked, hairy, territorial of the cloth they drape their loins in.
No one saw. I stripped the briefs off with one sweep and hurled them back in the locker, slamming the door, and opened my locker, and grabbed my thin-in-the-seat underwear. To me they were very paradise.

I dressed hurriedly and ran to the exit,
I made good my escape, undetected.

But late nights I lie awake, and contemplate the sensation of those briefs, and know I am changed.
I will never judge another man before I have stood a minute or two in his underpants. And maybe not then.

Hitler In The Vestibule

The bald old man sat at table spooling his eggs With a spoon. I don't get it, Thomas, I told him, you could have been A famous musician, and Fiddled in concert halls around the world.
At age eight you were tutored by Sarasate.
And here you are running a southside diner.
Why?

He grinned sheepishly, changed subjects. Did I Tell you about my confrontation with Hitler?
During the Anshuss of 1939 I was eight, I was Visiting Vienna for the second time that year.
Meister Drucker had booked us into the Kaiserhof,
And one morning I had nothing to do, so I boarded The elevator and pushed all the buttons.
Whenever the lift arrived at a floor, I would Push the button again. The car was an agony of Slowness.

It was the same hotel where the president had Agreed to meet Hitler that day, and downstairs
A mob of journalists were queuing in the lobby
With Hitler as he rocked from boot to boot, Waiting for the elevator to come down.
Diplomats on hand swallowed hard, worrying that Hitler would perceive the elevator's operation
As an incident of national mischief. When I Finally landed on the first floor, and the gate Swung open and I looked up at the black leather Coat of Herr Hitler, arms folded and a look of Considerable severity on his quaking features, I began to cry.

Poor Hitler. He craved, I think, to crush me Like a roach, it was what he need, what he lived

For, but with the photographers on hand and a Country to overrun, he was obliged to be on his Best behavior. So instead he smiled and I thought He looked much more like Oliver Hardy than Chaplin with that diagonal smirk, he scooped me Up in his arms, kissed the tears from my cheeks
And called me German baby names. I remember How smooth were his cheeks, how high-pitched his Speech, and the implacable look my first instructor Wore also.

The rotogravure ran under the headline of AUSTRIA SURRENDERS across the world. I Continued to study and to play.
But gradually I came to miss my own childhood, which had gotten lost in my abilities and my schedule.
I wanted to sit in a sandbox and smash wet Castles with my planes, wanted plebiscites And pogroms laying waste to my room. Because Hitler and I came to see the same thing.
Retreat one time, you never see action Again.

Penn Station

Passengers hug their luggage close and check their watches as they wait by the message board for news of the delayed train.
There is anxiety in people's faces.
One woman clasps her red gloves and keys in one hand.
A student looks up at the board with open mouth.
Then the letters start flipping and the speakers announce that the train to Princeton Junction is cleared for boarding and everyone breaks for the steps down to Track One, clambering down like a centipede in suit.
Once situated in our seats, we look up, out, and away as the conductor announces that a bridge in Newark is causing problems, and there will be an "indefinite delay."
A groan goes through the car like an infantry taking fire.
"Jesus Christ," mutters a man in a long coat, who looks like he is about to cry, and who obviously has someplace important he has to get to.
He and a dozen others bolt to their feet, grab their bags and rush back up the stairs to find a ride on another line. No sooner are they gone than the address system announces that the problems in Newark have been resolved, and the car begins to slide forward in the station.
I ask the conductor if we couldn't call the people back, and end their suffering.
The man just punches my ticket, smiles and says, "You're going to be just fine."

Maury

Every day it gets more real, real blood, Real punches, that's a real big brassiere
On the woman from Klamath Falls.

But the effect is like some circus
Where the sweat and pee of the show-ponies Is bled into a plastic cup.

Instead of feeling connected you feel A million years removed, Detached from the remarkable people

Bellywhumping their loved ones, Remote from your neighbors down the street,
From the people you are supposed to love.

The cord connecting set to wall That unplugs you from yourself,
And some sharp pitchfork poking holes,

Ignorance is snapping up residential real estate,
A volcano is growing in the cornfield.

The Clarinet Is A Difficult Instrument

I was eating minestrone when I heard something fall outside my apartment window.
Too dark to see much but a pair of hairy arms slam shut a window on the third floor of the building opposite mine.

In the morning all I found was a bent clarinet on cement, dented horn and pawn shop sticker saying nine dollars.

It reminded me of the French explorer Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac.
He too had dreams, set sail up the St. Lawrence, looking for China, and wound up settling in Detroit instead.

Mm-Hmm

Somewhere on the journey I picked up the habit Of answering Rachel absently
Mm-HMM,
With a hard accent on the second syllable, Like, Say WHAT? Or 'Scuse ME?
So that what sounds like it should be agreement, Oh my yes indeedy!
Comes across instead as judgmental reproach,
You want it WHEN?
You really believe THAT?
Rachel looks at me like I am Rex Harrison Correcting her on matters of everything From architecture to history to French vocabulary
And I sound like the world's consummate ass But I have no idea I'm doing it until I say it and look at her horror-stricken And evidently, deep down, in the pit of the soul where the dark things skitter That ass must be the man I am The guy who waits for other people to make mistakes
So he can shimmy down from his goalpost
And administer correction with a bonk.
Oh DEAR, pas MOI, ma CHERE.
Better to have one's tongue yanked from its housing than to be this fruity fish
But even keeping mouth shut is no guarantee because it is a hum, it is not even words, you can speak evil without articulating sounds O God I must guard against this tendency with all that is in me, Oh NO!
There it goes AGAIN, once you start you can't STOP, I have always been a know-it-all but until now I knew to keep that information to myself.
They told me if went to Europe it would change my outlook

But I look in the mirror and all I see is Transylvania

The Fly

Walking forlorn along the Mississippi,
I felt a deerfly land on my cheek.

Instead of me slapping it, it slapped me!
The tiniest hand you could imagine reared back and let me have it.
At most I felt a tiny itch.

And then a sound.
I could barely hear.
Perhaps, "britzel ... britzel ..."?

But I got the sense, loud and clear, that it was warning me about something, urging me to shape up.

"Listen," it was saying, "I'm going say this once.
Life is pain. Accept it! Accept it, you stupid, stupid man."

And then it buzzed off.

Now I am downgrading the alert.
It couldn't have meant much. Otherwise, every insect that annoys you is some kind of angel, sent to deliver a message.
About what is expected.
About how we must live.

I'm sorry, there are too many insects for that to be true.

Intuitions

Why do we hold them
In such high regard When they are what got us
The way that we are?

The Tide

complains ish ish ish

Tsunami

Just as the man stepped onto the stepstool and into the noose

a wall of water eighteen feet at the crest swept into the room the voice of God says You can't quit, you're fired

Why Did The Buddha Sit Under The Tree?

To get to the other side.

Parking Lot

The attendant at the parking lot Was angry this morning.
His shovel was missing,
And in a crack in the blacktop Near the corner of Eighth & LaSalle, Five weeds were sticking their heads up, Looking for trouble.

Minivan

We could not afford a good one but this was good enough for us, brown high-rider, automatic, slant six.
When we bought it we were in awe, it smelled like road angel, and though it had already rolled ninety thousand uphill miles with strangers in its seats we felt it had been waiting all along for us. I washed it, and stickered it, and drove it to the store.
We were partners, it and I.
So when I left it for an hour at the park and some guy smashed the passenger window with a tire iron and stole several hundred dollars of audio tapes I got at the library for our trip out west, I blamed myself, I should never have left my treasure alone.
And when we sailed west through badlands and buttes, and we filled our thermos at Wall Drug, and bought doughnuts for the kids it was with a new covenant between us, a promise to take care of her.
We parked it near the motel door every night, we locked it up and took the cameras inside.
And when I left our wallet and cash on a trash receptacle at a convenience store high in the Montana Rockies, and we realized it was gone and had a look in our eyes that had elements of hope and elements of despair and we sped back twenty miles up the mountain our minds hard from wishing, and there it was, people walking by, good decent wallet-ignoring Montañards, and we drove on, toward the Idaho border and beyond that, to the brightening sea, tearful with happiness and love for you, Grand Voyager, for you.

Man & Monarch

The man pokes out a finger as a perch ...
Sure enough, two flit close by ...
And he wonders what it might lead to ...
Some kind of breakthrough between butterfly and man ...
We have shared airspace but never points of view ...
The insects desire contact, but there is that matter of our pinning them to corkboards ...
We magnify their faces to make proper eye contact ...
But when we see their twitching protuberances up close we draw back ...
We hold peace conferences and praise them for their kitelike beauty ...
They describe their unhappiness with riding lawn mowers ...
They teach us about the dazzle of sunlight, about the silence of the chrysalis, the transformation from glutton worm to ravishing angel ...
We read poems and they beat their clapboard wings ...

When You Encounter A Bear

Appraise the situation. Might it be friendly? Do you see cubs in the vicinity? Is there a tree nearby, or a carcass?

Do not run. You can't outrun a bear so don't try.

People say to run downhill from a grizzly. Don't.

Try backing away. Sometimes they let you do that.

Climb that tree. Climb at least 33 feet off the ground so it can't get to you and hurl you down.

If successful with the tree, be sure you brought food with you, but not food with a delicious aroma. We suggest Skittles.

Try pepper spray. But know that pepper can act as an attractant.

Fight the bear. It will be difficult, but it will respect you more.

Should it maul you, keep your backpack on. Wear it in front of you if possible.

Do not play dead until you almost are.

Once mauled, be patient. Only when the bear has finished should you crawl away.

To His Missus Returned from the Sea

First night she sleeps her back to me like a semaphore signal

This vessel at anchor at last I say missus, and that stands for mistress, and all that was lost in the elision

It is like master except thoroughly admiral:
"The mastress set sail on a plunging mattress"

Upright, midnight, recondite Seamen hang listless in the rigging

Whitebacks stroke in the dinghy Heaving their spume upon the sea

Lesser men wince because the captain is voluble: How can you get a world in?

When edgewise is the most delicious way Resting her harpoon against the wall, she slips inside the stiffened sheets:

Regina! my Queequeg! my queen!

Entrepreneur

This spider studied real estate.
He built a web at the corner station over the sign flashing Quaker State -- location, location, location.

Antic Hey<sup>17</sup>

en route to our rendezvous I am handed a lit stick of dynamite and being polite
I do not refuse blackfaced and with smoldering collar I proceed, failing to notice the two-ton safe dropping from a fifth story window though accordioned

I make my way to you despite doors opening in my face that flatten it considerably too many incidents to recount them all the locomotive rushing from the hastily painted tunnel me poised for what seems like ages over the manhole hole before falling

the wet cement awaiting me soon hardened but do not despair love

I am coming

---

<sup>17</sup> The Beagles of Arkansas, 1978

Browsers <sup>18</sup>

He flipped through the magazines in the periodical room.

The Cadillac, he thought to himself, is definitely the Rolls-Royce of automobiles.

She sauntered through the stacks, fingers dusting the tops of rows.
The things I don't know, she pondered, could fill a book.

They stood in line at the check-out desk, shifting their weight like two ships passing in broad daylight.

My Poor Fish <sup>19</sup>

Can't go to Coon Rapids.
I can go to Coon Rapids whenever I want – weekends or after work.

---

<sup>19</sup> Borrowing from Minneapolis (To Pay St. Paul) (1980)

When You Are Pope<sup>20</sup>

When you are pope you can not be like other men.
You cannot be seen disappearing into limos outside casinos or polishing off a beer at a corner tavern, the old men snorting at your caftan and cap.
You cannot affect a commanding air, pulling at your cincture and laughing like a man, you must be humble all the day, you must be unworthy to loosen the bootstraps of the world, even if you are not feeling humble, or humble has become tiresome as a singsong prayer.
Everyone is your boss because everyone knows you and expects certain behavior.
No spitting, no grumpiness, no annoyance with fools for if you show any signs of being human they will not let you be pope any more and you will wind up on a bridge somewhere selling windup toys or grilled kebabs and people will come up to you squinting saying I know you.
You must always be for life and always be for peace and never concede the fact that everybody dies and the world is ripe with people who could benefit richly from a ferocious beating and everyone knows it but you are not allowed to say it.
People go on and on about this saint and that saint and you can say nothing though you know all the evidence in all their files, who was too fond of the muscatel, who wrote letters of an unholy nature, who masturbated with the lilies of the field, and who,
when the dog the body was disinterred and the coffin cracked the look on their face was a maniac grin, frozen that way for eternity.
It is hard to keep up with friends.

---

<sup>20</sup> Sunset Lake (1989)

It is just not the same once you are pope.
They are so fond of you now, fonder than they ever were before and nothing you say gets through to them, they won't let you be honest any more.
There are times you want to burst out crying and tell them everything what a crock the Vatican is and what assholes the cardinals all are and what you would give just to sit and play cards and sip gin like you used to years ago before people stopped listening.
When you are pope you understand your career has probably peaked, there will probably not be many achievements after this,
it will be unusual even to catch a fish on a Saturday in an aluminum boat, the little waves banging against the prow, and haul it flipping into your net.
You will look over your shoulder and the lake will be full of other boats, and film crews and helicopters, and people will say it's not a fish, it's an allegory, you have to think about this on a very complex level, nothing is simple any more.
When you are pope it is sadder than you imagined.
The devout and the suffering look to you as if you had the answers for their madness, for the cough that has been getting worse, for the world in arms, and the torture of the faithful over slow flames,
and what you would do to take away the pain but what can you do, you are only a pope.
Your faith that never let you down before is suspect, you haven't heard from God in years, he is like some clever zephyr that blows into town and blows out again, now you see him, then for thousands of years you don't,
and if gets to be too much and you start to doubt it's your fault, where's your faith you sad son of a bitch, I was just waiting for this moment, I knew you would disappoint me.

And now the light pours in at Castle Gandolfo, and you awaken late and your kidneys ache and you wonder how long you can carry the cross for the rest of the world, and you think of a girl you knew in school, and you wonder what became of her, if she got old and fat and lost that look that lifted you up off your feet all those years ago or she is still who she was, only better, a lifetime later, and all this time she could have been your friend,
and you turn in the bedsheets, holding your side, you feel as if a spear has fetched water from you,
and it is seeping away like raindrops from the body, shiny as silver, as famous as dust.

The Newmans of Westport<sup>21</sup>

It is said that on a stormy night when a traveler is most in need of a helping hand they are out there in their Ferrari, idling, extra gas and jumper cables at the ready.

Few are the motorists who drive the length of the Connecticut Turnpike without receiving road assistance from Paul and Joanne.

She waits in your car with you, chatting of the weather, blushing at your compliments, coupons for popcorn and salad oil spilling from the glove compartment.

He is immediately under your hood, blue eyes blinking away the damp, righting the wrong connections.

Joanne has a plate of fresh brownies,
Paul a wool sweater to warm you up.

To be of use, that is the thing, atonement in the grease and gravel and lesser people's luck.
This simplicity saves them from fame, your distributor outweighs every glory they have known.

And when the emergency subsides, you wave goodbye and they smile

---

<sup>21</sup> Namedroppings (1982)

through clutched raincoats and return to wait for the next living soul.

God & Hippopotamus <sup>22</sup>

In the beginning God said to Hippopotamus: Kiboko, I want this bank kept clean.
Your job is to keep the grass in line.

Kiboko answered the Lord saying:
Your will is my will, but please, Lord,
May I loll my sun-hours in the stream?

God thought deeply upon the matter; finally He said Oh, all right, Just don't eat all the fish.

Now every night Kiboko mashes clay Between her hooves. When she goes She shits and pisses both at once,

Her tail a propeller scattering the mess
Up and down the twilit bank Distributing it for God to examine.

See? she says, her billiard-ball eyes Rolling up to the moon – No scales.

---

<sup>22</sup> Water Hills (1985)

Old Stone Enters Into Heaven <sup>23</sup>

THE MASTER CALLS HIM TO HIS REWARD *

Old Stone was a mean man, whole Town of Kinbrae knew that for Entertainment he used to take pot Shots at his dog, a good old girl Deserving better. One day Stone was Said to have got bad news from Montevideo, folks saw him stride Past the post master's kicking dust, Spitting on the side walk and Cussing out the Goose Town Savings & Loan. Mr. Miller said he purchased A package of Illinois whiskey and That was what they found later on, a Broken bottle by the pump house well That'd just gone dry. Must have Hauled his rifle down where it hung By the stove and stomped out to the Yard with a box of fresh shells, Loaded and reloaded, pumped lead Into the milk shed wall and cackled And gnashed his nasty teeth. His Yellow tears skittered down his dry Cheeks as the dark deed formed in His mind, the notion occurring to Complete the thing for once and for All, and he whistled Betty to heel
At his feet. And she sidled,

---

<sup>23</sup> Borrowing from Minneapolis (To Pay St. Paul), 1980

* I wrote this story in 1977, when I was living in Kinbrae, Minnesota. The actual story took place in Hector, Minnesota, but Kinbrae had stories too. The legwork was done by, I believe, the poet-ag activist Joe Paddock, or a history-gathering team he was part of in Renville County. My task was to make it fun. It was like stealing a pie from a window sill.

Shivering, up and imploringly searched For the better nature behind his red Eyes as he pulled two sticks of Dynamite from a tool bin and tied Them to the poor bitch's tail, lit
The long fuse, smacked her hind end And sat down on the hole and watched Through the open out house door as The dog took off yelping straight Through the kitchen doorway and dove Under the master's brass post bed With the eider down comforter pulled Down in after her. No no no no, Cried Stone, and he screamed with All his saw toothed might with the Indignation of a man so wronged by Creation perverted by willful beasts Like a dog so dumb she couldn't even Get blown up right, and he screeched Her name and called her forth and Condemned her disloyalty as the Least best friend a most cursed man Might have, a churlish cur who Fought his dominion from the day she Was whelped, who missed regular naps Thinking up ways to undo him, him, Him who now wailed like a ghost to Get out, get out, get out, get out Of my pine board, tar paper, china Platter house God damn your four Legged soul. And Betty, hearing his Break down with out and imagining Herself the object of some grand Reprieve at the hands of this Passionate and lovable if you really Undertook to know him but until then

Deeply misunderstood failure of a Man and imagining moreover her life Long ordeal at those knotted hands
To be miraculously over and herself Forgiven of the loathsome crime of Having been his, dashed happily down
The rock porch steps and full tilt
And with her master's heartfelt Cries of No no no no no echoing Across the wooded glade leapt gladly Into his awe crossed arms and the Two best friends saw eye to eye, Each bade goodbye, and left Kinbrae Forever.

The Wreck of the Hesperus <sup>24</sup>

On a foggy morning in '76 I idled my VW at the intersection of Cedar and 28th Streets, awaiting the traffic light's decision.

Stealing through the mist nearby a two-axle truck headed for the landfill manned by Steve and his uncle Guy, would soon have a screaming handful.

The garbage truck in overdrive gathered speed in lightly falling rain.
My fevered brain could not surmise the convergence of the twain.

I heard a poem in my ear.
The light was red, but turning green.
I slipped the Superbeetle into first gear and throttled the machine.

The truck's enormous left front tire rolled up onto my hood, and the truck ramped into the air, all white and beautiful and good.

My car stopped instantly, crushed.
I watched the truck fly o'er the intersection, and the great nose pushed itself into the asphalt floor.

The axles snapped and spun away.
Two wheels in tandem headed east.
The great container heaved and swayed

---

<sup>24</sup> The Ballad of the Curtis Hotel (1994)

and tipped and dumped its feast.

Coffee grounds, eggshells, cereal boxes scattered wide and far.
The screeching metal carrier scraped street and gave off sparks.

Banana peels, venetian blinds, and Sunday comics sections.
Burned out light bulbs and orange rinds with jotted down directions.

I saw a flattened beach ball skin flapping in the truck's rubble.
I saw Guy and Steve stagger from within and feared there might be trouble.

The men seemed drunk and at a loss.
Their feet met no resistance.
People on the sidewalks paused to offer their assistance.

Me, I crawled from the front seat, cassette deck in one hand.
I had a small bump on my head but was otherwise able to stand.

An ancient man from a nursing home stepped forward with accusing eye.
He gestured with his finger bone that I was to draw nigh.

"Young man," he asked in squeaky falsetto,
"What church do you go to?"
I asked why the old man wanted to know.
"Because I want to go to that church, too."

University Avenue <sup>25</sup>

I was working at M&L Motor Supply on University Avenue across from Wards, making $108 a week as an order filler guy while attending college part time. It was 1969.

My job was to take phoned in orders, push a cart through the warehouse, locate the parts that were in stock, box them for shipment, and backorder the rest.

This particular day I was standing on a step stool poking at the box-end of a Mopar combo tailpipe and muffler for a '64 Plymouth Fury when the pipe began sliding down toward me.

The box was eight foot long, contained 46 lbs. of hardened steel. It was falling now, falling from the stacks, sailing down to me like a bride, and it struck me on the left side of my forehead.

The blow alone would have knocked me out, a baseball bat could not have hit harder but first it sent the ladder teetering, back, back until I fell backward and crashed to the floor.

When I came to I was changed. I struggled to stand. My fingers tingled. I felt an egg, a protruding bud from my brow. I looked in the mirror in the dirty warehouse toilet and washed away the blood.

And I remembered. I had a final exam at one o'clock in my class on prosody in the Humanities Building at the University. I had completely forgot.

---

<sup>25</sup> The Ballad of the Curtis Hotel (1994)

The Borg Warner clock over the carburetor kits said 1:25.

Snow was falling and wind was blowing,
I staggered out to the street in T-shirt, tie-dyed but I did not feel cold. A 16-A bus was just approaching from Hamline Avenue, and I boarded, wild-eyed.

Where's your money? The driver asked. Eighty five cents!
I looked at him like Long John Silver under the egg and said You have to get me to the University!
and took a seat halfway to the back.

The passengers were coming home from morning shift.
One man wore a hat that said Gopher Gears,
And the same word on his jacket and thermos.
The phrase has stuck with me over the years.

I sat quiet but in my mind I was standing and telling them Do not be afraid my brothers and sisters, I will make the journey from St. Paul to Minneapolis, I will do business there with TAs and professors,

I will be valorous in my actions and acquit myself in a way you will be proud of. The assembly and forklift people will not be ashamed this day of one of their own climbing the heights of classical poetry.

I stepped off the bus at the University quad, made my way to Ford Hall Room 108, burst through the door, and every eye looked up at the egghead from the Midway in the torn T shirt.

I grabbed a blue book from the stack and read the question: Analyze Houseman's "Eight O'Clock" and explain how poetic form helps further the poet's message.
Ordinarily I might have struggled in vain with this assignment but I had been struck by a muffler from the gods, and I had insights I had never had before, when the pipe hit me full it poured into me a galaxy of lights.

I knew this poem by heart somehow. I had knelt on its floor and drunk its dark waters.
I scanned the poem in fifteen seconds and began to write in the book, in big black letters.

"Each sprinkle of the clock tower bell brings the condemned man closer to his time.
Each stanza of the poem is his knell, each line a stair to, trembling, climb."

I stood and threw the blue book on the desk, the astonished professor shrank as I left the hall and the graduate students on scholarship whispered about the mysterious boy from St. Paul.

I would get an A, of course, but that was not the point, I was transformed, beyond dreams.
I stood on the walkover bridge and gazed out over the brilliant white cloud of toilet paper plant steam.

Gods and goddesses choose us mortals not by our bloodlines or superior mothering but because a magnet pulls metal down from the sky that tempers and makes us fit vessels for suffering.

University Avenue begins at the Capitol and peters out only God knows where, in Blaine.
But I am with you to the fullness of time, and in my bones and skull I map your pain.

'The Minstrel & The Ladie' <sup>26</sup>

The singer's message: I am only a boy
And my songs and my fiddle
My only true friends.

But the woman banging her glass
On the formica bartop is receiving Transmissions of life in the wild,

She envisions geese lifting
From a fern-bog in the peninsula
Of a state she has never visited.

Between numbers she buys him a beer
And for a moment there is no Ramada Inn:
Young man, I want to kiss you everywhere.

But he clings to character, stammers
His Thank you Ma'am but home's a distance,
And the roads up Moorhead way are slick.

To no avail. She's deaf. Changing.
Already she's a brute brown bear In the northerly wood,

Already enjoying the scratch
She knows comes next on her rump
On the broken spruce branches.

---

<sup>26</sup> Water Hills, 1985

Embarrass<sup>27</sup>

Forty minutes I stand in the reception line.
Finally I reach the newly widowed man, standing by Olive's open coffin, and I will remember these words forever.
'Hey Vern, great to see you.'

---

<sup>27</sup> Borrowing from Minneapolis (To Pay St. Paul), 1980

Death as Snack Cake<sup>28</sup>

the grave's a fine and spongey place a twinkie of an eye and we who dreamed so many things are the filling surprise

---

<sup>28</sup> The House of Murk (1972)

To the Young Poet Who Wished
To Know How to Do Better<sup>29</sup>

Your haiku are too long.

---

<sup>29</sup> Horses Work Hard (2000)

Billboard <sup>30</sup>

Mounted above a TV repair shop along Dale Street in Saint Paul is a billboard with the immense face of a man on it, thirty feet tall, as tall as a movie screen.

His tie is askew, his collar is wild, like a man who has been running in his suit.

His coloring is all wrong, orange and blotchy red,
as if he spent hours in a tanning booth, then guzzled down a fifth of cheap gin.

The man is perhaps 30, and he is holding a phone to his ear and smiling,

but the receiver does not appear to be connected.

“I’m Steve Larson of Sunset Realty,” the sign says, “and I buy homes for cash!”

He seems both innocent and crude, as if having the belief that just seeing his huge face, faking a phone call, grinning from high above the traffic, will make us want to hand over our houses and give him the keys.

I imagine his pals clap him on the back for pulling off this stunt but that even he knows, when he drives this way late at night,

When the traffic dies down, that he could not be nakeder to the world,

promising cash in hand if people will only turn over their lives to him,

than if that giant face were festooned on the moon, agog at what is possible below.

---

<sup>30</sup> Midnight at the Mounds (2004)

Remainders <sup>31</sup>

Copies of my poems went on sale at Odegard Books,
The precise word is remaindered, Marked down from three ninety five to just the ninety five,
And it hit me that this gambit by the bookstore Was just what people had been waiting for.

Sure, you expect people to hold back, Especially at today's prices. Three ninety five is A piece of change, no doubt about it,
And there must be people who thumb the book And pat it with one hand as if weighing the Poems against the expense, the expense against The poems, take one step toward the cashier
And then fail in their purpose, put the book back In the rack, and pick up a copy of American Poetry Review, Beautiful things wonderfully said,
For under three dollars, a wonderful buy, instead.

But who could balk at ninety five cents,
Why, that's less than a dollar with a nickel left over,
You could buy the poems and have enough to Handle the sales tax, nineteen for the poet and One for the State of Minnesota and its beautiful Forests and waterfowl.

[Actually, all nineteen don't go to the poet. I was Promised a ten percent royalty, which meant forty cents On the full price, and the fine print here says When a book goes remainder there isn't really Any royalty at all, but I don't care, I didn't Write them for the forty cents, you see,
I wrote them for this feeling I'm having right now
Of breaking through, of getting out, Of seeing the birds I'd stored in the box Fly out of it, white wings fair clapping the morning air.]

---

<sup>31</sup> Remainders (1990)

Ninety five cents for thirty five poems, That's less than three pennies apiece. Here's one About some weeds growing in sidewalk cracks,
So what, it's only six lines long but at three cents Who's going to complain? Here's another, A beautiful lyric, a love poem connecting To the Italian futurist movement of the nineteen-teens, It was published in a number of respected magazines,
For less than three cents you won't need a vacation tour
This year, just read the words and feel their awful power.

Or the final poem, I call it 'The Light, ' which was all My life in sonnet length, how there were things I thought I always wanted, but when I got them they were Different, or I was unable to recognize them – such pathos
As would melt the stony heart, and I lay it all down
For you, vulnerable, small, the shattered clown, The paper trembles with the grief of truth,

Because here it is, softcover renaissance,
And all it costs is three lousy cents.
My ear to the ground I can detect the build Of momentum, people swearing off bad habits forever, People afraid to look one another in the eye
Now looking and seeing the pain and love that had been there All along, now reaching out, fingertips touching,
The sting of tears collecting in the corners Of millions and thousands, the soft collapse Of a hundred brittle barriers of reason and attitude Finally available, the incandescent word
At prices the masses can afford.

Let us go now, you and I, to Odegards.
For life has many sales but few true bargains.
Let us take the silver coins and hand them to the person And remember to ask for the receipt, if you're a poet Your whole life is deductible.
Oh daughters of Homer gather round his knees

And hear him sing his saltstrong songs.
There are myriad of you there,
A speckled galaxy of brave little lights, Fresh washed garments tucked under your knees, Eager for instruction and keen for meaning,
He cannot see you but he hears you breathing.

Anteater

He's a tough negotiator.
He doesn't just eat you, he eats your wife and he eats your children and he eats your mother and he eats your cousins and he eats your insurance agent he eats everyone you know.
He eats your whole city then tucks the last ant in the side of his maw and says
I'm sorry,
I can't help it
I was made this way,

I require large numbers of ants to survive.

If You Like Poetry

There probably something wrong with you.
You have an appetite for grandiosity, or inability to deal with everyday reality your sense of self has been splintered so you dwell in solipsistic space.
Perhaps you are afraid of confrontation and so you seek retribution on the page.
Or your anger at injustice has taken you to a place where you need to smolder by yourself, Or your attention span is not what it might be – isn't that a spider on your sweater?

Pandit

The vocational counselor in Delhi Apologized for giving bad advice:
'Not every young Brahmin with money Is wise.' Many years later, Pandit's swami, glancing about his Townhouse in St. Anthony Falls, Shook his head. 'Pandit-ji, ' he Said, 'your instincts are bad Enough, but your lifestyle has got To go.' Every guru starts Somewhere, and for Pandit the Crossing occurred one evening in 1973. He had chanted a special Intention for two nights and a day,
And now his skin began to evanesce And a glow like radium suffused his Features and the bones of his hands And feet shone in the rice-paper Silhouette like moonlit twigs.
Suddenly Swami barges in, unplugs The lava-lamp and shakes Pandit by The shoulders. 'Wake up, Balbir, You disgrace to your caste. When Will you quit all this fidgeting? ' Four years of doctrine and Contemplation and Swami Mukhtaranda Throws up his hands. 'Tell me, have You considered a career in Dentistry? People get toothaches, You could be useful. We have been Discussing your case at Himalayan Central in the Loop. Pandit-ji, It's not working out.' Pandit Breaks down on the other end. 'But What of my chapel, with the acoustic Paneling and foam carpet pads –
What of the rent, the three skinny

Daughters, Irish setter, Triumph Roadster? Give me another chance, Business will boom.' Swami relents:
'Just thank God you're in Minneapolis where you can't hurt Anyone.' Pandit attends continuing Education courses in business Management at the university Convention center, learns the seven Words to seal a sale, prints Meditation coupons in the back pages Of the Sunday TV section. Hatha Enrollments begin to swell, a course In breathing for data processors Draws overflow crowds, registered Nurses from around the city salute
The sun from every angle. Suburban Gardeners no longer worry about Scaly-worm and red-ear mites. Swami Writes: 'I am man enough to admit I Was wrong. You're some kind of Pandit. Christmas is out, we're Booked at Vail six months in Advance.' Pandit spawns a yogi Tummy, bolstered by his taste for Hostess Snowballs. The wisdom of The East is born again, Midwestern.
'Shift gears with your one mind, Retain the other for the clutch.'
He hires so many assistant pandits
He doesn't know which one smokes Luckies and lectures on the holy Wind within. His checkbook is Bulging, his checks in the popular Scenic Wilderness design, the Rockies, Mojave, Maine lighthouse
And drive-thru Sequoia. But Sunday Mornings while the Christians pray, Pandit snaps on snorkel and weighted

Boots, and drifts the tangled floor Of Lake Calhoun. 'On surface, ' he Tells his class on scuba yoga, 'we Encounter the brunt of life's Agitations, those waves and splashes Which torment the honest heart. But When we go below we feel this Unlikely thing, the tranquil wet Embrace.' He pads through the mud, Brushes long ropes of alga aside. I Am I, he inhales, Thou art Thou, he Exhales, and here in this constant Kiss of life is the successful Career of one soldier of Shiva in These United States.

I Saw A Deer, Now I Must Write A Poem

I saw a buck bolt onto Highway 5, down by the airport, where workers are fixing the bridge.

Suddenly it was there, standing by the shoulder, its side all rough as if scraped against stone, then bolting into traffic, dodging cars, leaping over the lane divider, skidding away from a trailer truck, then vaulting onto a bank of unaccustomed slag, and dancing, whitetail bounding, back into the trees.

The wrong place at the wrong time, rush hour, it was lucky it didn't get run over.
Motorists were shocked, workers stared open-mouthed.
The frantic look in the deer's eyes spelled terror, confusion, the suggestion of reproach.

Deer and construction sites don't mesh,
the deer so fragile sprinting between bulldozers.
The overarching sense that road construction is wrong and cars should pull over and give the natural order the right of way and any poet seeing a deer in the wild must file a complete report, express solidarity with the animal, remorse for the thud of mankind, acknowledge complicity in the hazing of innocent blood.

I was thinking that if deer had short legs and made grunting noises there would be fewer poems about them.

lcky

was the name of her fish, a tetra I bought her when she was three.

we spoke to him
we touched him and one day he died

you know my darling I began to explain that life is how we share our love and it's OK to be sad when we lose a dear sort of a friend

she finally spoke
'You know, daddy ' she said
'he was only a fish'

Nighttime in Heaven

was the nicest surprise because you expect it to always be day but after dark is when the fun starts and all the praise is packed away there is music far across the lake and occasional applause and whistles for long stretches everything is impossibly funny, and you keep saying of course, of course except your cheeks don't ache and there is time for tender walks under a moon that is bigger than a house and if you want you can rest on the stoop hand in hand with your life's best friend everyone sleeps in a heaving pile and has the most wonderful dreams people of every ethnicity smacking their lips and don't try to do the math on this but they all hold on to god's pajamas